How to Enter - and WIN - Poetry Contests

Wanda Sue Parrott

author of The Last Indian on the Trail of Tears

Using the tips revealed in this book, your chances of winning poetry and writing contests may increase dramatically! Award-winning poet, journalist, and author, Wanda Sue Parrott shares highlights, hints, and step-by-step instructions gleaned from a 20-year career as co-founder and contest administrator of the National Annual Senior Poets Laureate Poetry Competition for American poets age 50 and older, co-founder of the Annual White Buffalo Native American Poet Laureate Contest, and as winner in countless contests entered over the past half century.

"Wanda Sue Parrott has captured every literary avenue available for writers to enter poetry contests with confidence of winning. This publication is of quality and a poetic creation that is both enjoyable and educational to read."

Award winning writer

Wanda Sue Parrott is best known for her "Shortcuts to Success" approach to writing and for writing under 18 pen names, one of which is Prairie Flower. Born in Kansas City, Missouri, Wanda grew up in Southern California. She lived in Springfield, Missouri, from 1988 to 2009, where she co-founded the regional Senior Poet Laureate Contest, known internationally since 1994 as the National Annual Senior Poets Laureate Poetry Competition for American poets age 50 and older. Poetry writing is one of Wanda's hobbies; she is a retired award-winning writer, writing teacher, and honorary life member of Missouri State Poetry Society. She currently lives in Monterey, California, where she volunteers as contest administrator for Central Coast Writers branch of California Writers Club.
